Individuals are hereby invited to submit applications to present concurrent sessions at the 2019 South Carolina Council for African American Studies Conference.

Conference Theme: African American Studies in the Classroom: An Interdisciplinary Approach

Purpose
The South Carolina Council for African American Studies (SCCAAS) is a professional organization for persons interested in any aspect of African American studies and its instruction. African-American studies is an inter/multidisciplinary academic field dedicated to a comprehensive study of the historical, political, and social development of African Americans in the United States. SCCAAS mission is to support integrated efforts to include African-American literature, history, politics, religion and religious studies, sociology, and many other disciplines within the humanities and social sciences in Grades K- 12 instruction.

Toward this end, SCCAAS invites proposals for presentations that demonstrate an interdisciplinary approach to teaching the African American experience in grades K-12 instruction. Such proposals should focus on innovative strategies, current best practices, educational policies, and should be classroom-ready for teachers and other conference attendees. Each session will last 1 hour. Presentations should be no longer that 50 minutes. Time should be allotted for interactive conversations between presenters and participants.

Call for Papers/Workshops: Presentations [1 hour]
Submission Deadline: [December 21, 2018]
